PREFACE.

"Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see, Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be."

How well I have accomplished my task, remains for others to say. But one word of caution to my critics: Before passing an unfavorable opinion upon this piece of work, let them lay this monograph aside and then make one at first-hand similar to it. By that time I am inclined to think their darts will be harmless.

In every instance I have done all in my power to get back to the sources—the novels themselves in the first editions. I assume no responsibility for the correctness of the titles and dates of books I have not seen. But little confidence can be placed in the dates and titles as given by various encyclopedias and books on American literature. This is especially true of books written on Southern literature by Southern authors in recent years. Most of these I have found absolutely worthless when accuracy is at stake. Two notable exceptions are the Life of Simms, by W. P. Trent, and the Virginia Edition of Poe, by Dr. James A. Harrison. These two gentlemen have made every effort to reach first-hand results. Nothing has been added to the results reached by Dr. Harrison, and no errors have been discovered in his dates or titles.

As to the matter included herein, the lines have not been drawn at the novel alone; but novels, tales, tragedy, comedy, short stories in prose and verse, and metrical romances have been included. No account is taken of books written in foreign languages, but a few translations have been listed.

I have cited every notice and review that I could find in available Southern magazines and also in a few Northern ones. There yet remains an unexploited field, the excellent collection of ante-bellum Southern newspapers in the Library of Congress. Many volumes have been found by chance. Several advertisements appearing in the novels themselves have been reproduced for obvious reasons. I have indicated the present location of every book that I have personally examined.

During my resident work at the University of Virginia I have had the pleasure of receiving instruction from the following gentlemen: Dr. M. W. Humphreys, Dr. Noah K. Davis, Dr. Charles W. Kent, Dr. James A. Harrison, Dr. R. H. Wilson, Dr. E. B. Setzler, Professor Thomas Fitz-Hugh, and Dr. W. H. Faulkner. To each of them I express my gratitude for their helpfulness to me.

In the actual preparation of this monograph, I am indebted to Dr. Kent for suggesting the subject, for general guidance, and for his ever ready aid in procuring the necessary books by purchase when possible. To Mr. John S. Patton, Librarian of the University of Virginia, and Miss Anna S. Tuttle, Assistant Librarian, I am indebted for aid in obtaining material by loans from other libraries, and also for many helpful suggestions. I have always profited by Mr. Patton's sane judgment, while Miss Tuttle's enthusiastic interest in my work has been a constant source of inspiration to me. I am under obligations to the Library of Congress both for the loan of books and for granting me special favors while working there. It is a genuine pleasure to work under such conditions as are offered by this library. Brown University has furnished many rare volumes not to be found elsewhere. The Virginia State Library has lent a few volumes. Dr. John W. Wayland has given aid by calling my attention to some helpful books, while his advice on many points has enriched my results. Dr. James A. Harrison, with whom I have had many conferences, has given me many valuable hints. My obligation to others is acknowledged at various places.

In conclusion I wish to express my high appreciation of what Dr. Kent has done for me. His power and enthusiasm as a teacher have meant much to me,—more than words can convey.

JAMES GIBSON JOHNSON.

A LIST OF AUTHORS, WITH THEIR WORKS IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER.

The following abbreviations are used for libraries :

Congress, for the Library of Congress;

Harris, for the Harris Collection of American Poetry at Brown University;

U. Va., for the Library of the University of Virginia.

The names of other libraries are self-explanatory. Whenever the word Congress, Harris, U. Va. or the name of any other library is appended to a book or magazine it must be construed as meaning that the writer has personally examined the book or magazine in question.

All reviews and notices in the Southern Literary Messenger, the Southern Literary Journal, the Southern Rose, the Southern Literary Gazette, the Southern Quarterly Review, Russell's Magazine, the Atlantic Monthly, Sartain's Magazine, and DeBow's Review were discovered by the writer. The same responsibility applies to all novels, tales, dramas, and short stories cited as being published in any of the above magazines.

"The leading object of 'Bernard Lile' was to show that no strength of will, no genius, no gifts of fortune and no accomplishments, are sufficient of themselves to save us from the greatest errors in our journey through the world. In 'Mustang

Gray" this idea is carried still farther, and I have endeavored to show that no associations, no natural gentleness of disposition and no pious training in early life, will suffice to prevent us from yielding to the temptations of passion." Author's preface to Mustang Gray.

"Ten years ago the author heard, at bed time, some extraordinary incidents that had befallen a young friend of his. The romantic character of these incidents excited his fancy so, that he could not sleep until a tale was fabricated out of the materials, and the mind had unburdened itself by putting its conceptions on paper. After a hasty revision, this effusion of a restless imagination was sent to the press. It was published in a literary periodical of Philadelphia, and to the author's mortification, a good deal blurred by a foul typography. It was copied errors and all, into several country papers; and in spite of defects, whether in authorship or typography, the natural intent of the story caused it to be considerably admired. . . . This revision has more than doubled its size." From the preface to the second edition. So. Lit. Mess., July, 1839, p. 469.

University, at Columbia, each have copies of this book, but the writer has been unable to see either of them.

The University of Virginia library possesses a set of Simms's romances in 17 volumes, 12mo., cloth. The Martin & Hoyt Co., Publishers, Atlanta, Georgia. Each volume bears this legend: "Presented to the Poe Alcove by Prof. Ed. S. Joynes through Prof. J. A. Harrison, 1901." The titles to the volumes are as follows: The Yemassee: A Romance of Carolina, New and Revised Edition. (Pp. 454.) The Wigwam and the Cabin, New and Revised Edition. (Pp. 472.) Charlemont; or, The Pride of the Village; A Tale of Kentucky. (Pp. 447.) Southward Ho! A Spell of Sunshine. (Pp. 472.) Guy Rivers: A Tale of Georgia. (Pp. 503.) Border Beagles: A Tale of Mississippi. (Pp. 495.) Beauchampe: or, The Kentucky Tragedy. A Sequel to Charlemont.

(Pp. 402.) Richard Hurdis: A Tale of Alabama. (Pp. 401.) Confessions of the Blind Heart. A Domestic Story. (Pp. 398.) Woodcraft; or, Hawks about the Dovecote. A Story of the South at the Close of the Revolution. (Pp. 518.) Eutaw: A Sequel to the Forayers; or, The Raid of the Dog-Days. A Tale of the Revolution. (Pp. 582.) The Scout; or, The Black Riders of the Congaree. (Pp. 472.) The Forayers; or, The Raid of the Dog-Days. (Pp. 560.) Katharine Walton; or, The Rebel of Dorchester. (Pp. 474.) Mellichampe. A Legend of the Santee. (Pp. 431.) The Partisan: A Romance of the Revolution. (Pp. 531.) Vasconcelos: A Romance of the New World. (Pp. 531.)

According to Wegelin the New York Historical Society has a fine collection of Simms's romances. Brown University has a good collection of his poems. The Southern Literary Messenger contains many of his poems, and some of his dramas.
